MONTHLY REVIEW

The Japanese stock market rallied for six consecutive months in June, with the Nikkei 225 closing above 33,000 on 30 June. The Bank of Japan's decision to maintain its loose monetary policy at its meeting on 16 June was well received by the markets, as yen depreciation boosted expectations of higher earnings for exporters amidst rising US interest rates. With Japan's wage growth at its highest level in 30 years, the stock market looks to be in an upward trend as domestic demand is expected to also increase. All sectors saw growth in June and small- and mid-cap stocks in particular outperformed large caps towards the month-end.
